Chapter 1

His axe sunk into another layer of ropy greenery with a meaty whump. Atheras grunted, and took a moment to wipe the sweat from his brow. The guard captain had spent so long warning him of the so-called “dangers” of this damnable forest, he’d neglected to mention how much work rescuing his old swordmaster would be. If the commoner had focused on the true difficulties that awaited him on his mission, he might’ve successfully dissuaded him.

Of course, the prince knew better than to believe the ghost stories. Wraiths that stalked the forest, strong enough to split metal, taking away able-bodied young men, never to be seen again...or worse, sending them back to their homes years later, an empty shell of a man, missing their...

He shuddered. Surely, it was more nonsense his obsessive mother had dreamt up to scare him off. Ever since she’d taken the throne, she’d done everything in her power to protect him. It’d kept him safe, sure...and it kept him out of the songs. His grandfather slew a bear at the age of 14, and united the empire at 20. His father had a half a dozen victorious sieges under his belt by the time he’d wed his mother at the ripe age of 22. Atheras, at 19, had dulled his blade on naught but his dueling partners’ armor. And while he was adept enough at dueling, no man should remain unblooded this long. Some of the more insolent nobility had started some most unflattering rumors. True, but unflattering. If he heard one more veiled reference to his “sheathed sword”...

It didn’t help that fate had denied him the physical advantages his noble blood owed him. His forefathers were brawny-armed, thick-shouldered, and covered neck to nape in hair as thick as wool, and the bastards had seen fit to pass on none of those classic Cantelan traits to him. He was scrawny, his hair curly and fine, his shoulders rounded and weak. If they were stags, he was a young doe. And, if the bawdy tavern songs about his ancestors had any truth to them, his build wasn’t the only place he differed from them.

Just thinking about that sent him flushing. A prince just wasn’t supposed to have a cock smaller than his thumb.

...as his older sister Lurian had told him so often. He winced, recalling the mocking tone she used to remind him of his weakness. She was a princess, but she didn’t act like it. Their relationship had been...painful. In more ways than one.

Without the yoke of eventual kingship to keep her in line, she'd had been allowed freedom from his mother's watchful eye, and she'd used it to torment him mercilessly. It started after she'd walked in on him seconds after a moment of weakness, of a type that had become more and more common. He was still spurting his royal seed onto himself, his sheath pulled all the way down his rock-hard cock, when she swung the door open to a full view of his princely pride at the worst possible moment. Her shrieks of laughter brought his Queen Mother down to investigate, and the conversation that followed was one of the most humiliating memories of his life.

"You must keep it all inside of you, my sweet boy. At least until your marriage. Then you can use it to make lots and lots of royal babies! But playing with yourself...it's very shameful, and wrong, ok? For any man, but especially for a king." She frowned, and he couldn't help but notice her eyes dart between his legs; she hadn't waited for him to get dressed before her lecture.

He nodded along, too embarrassed to speak.

"I mean it, Atheras. No matter how good it feels, don't touch yourself anymore. Ever."

"But mother, sometimes I...I can't help myself." His face was burning now, but he couldn't lie to his mother.

"I know you think that, but you can. A king needs to keep himself pure. Spilling your seed...it weakens you, Atheras. Makes you less than you are. It unmans you."

"But the songs..."

"Yes, I've heard those bawdy tavern thumpers too. Some men are strong enough to dirty themselves with tavern whores and exotic conquests, and still go on to be kings. Your father was certainly quite...popular, in his prime, before he gave me the throne."

"I...I want that too, mother. I'm a man too."

"Son." She sighed, shaking her head, her eyes glued to the shrunken lump between his legs. His birthskin hung off like a too-large sock. "You are not your father. You're your own man. You need to find your own way in the world, and that doesn't mean abusing yourself. Your father doesn't have your...fragile constitution. So you need to be more gentle with yourself. Promise me you won't spill your seed until you're married? With yourself, or anyone else?"

"I promise."

When he left the room, he found his sister sitting outside, struggling to contain her laughter.

From then on, Lurian seemed to be on the hunt for a chance to catch him in the shameful act. He still needed relief, but he'd learned to do it quickly and furtively, never daring to enjoy himself too long lest he got caught. The lesson remained with him forever: his honor must always come before his pleasure.

Still, he only had so much self control. And there were only so many places for him to hide when he took his relief.

Throughout his life, the queen mother did her best to protect his "fragile constitution". She kept him out of hunts, royal dances, harems, taverns, and any mission that had even remotest danger. It was even why she'd kept the royal surgeon from fixing him the way every nobleman had for generations, claiming that he'd never recover from such an "injury". Never mind that only peasants kept their birth skin intact.

Even before he'd ridden off on his quest last night, she'd been cajoling him into staying.

"Princes don't need to be battle-scarred hairy monsters, dear. They can be handsome and gentle too. You've such a strong...soul. And you're so good on the dueling grounds, and when you're prancing your horse about..."

"Riding, Mother."

"Right, riding your little horse about. No one can doubt you're a proper noble man. And when you speak...Oh, you are so eloquent! You don't need to worry about those boys. You don't need to...risk it out there. Some boys just aren't meant for adventure and fighting. Let your men find Heimdall. I'm sure they can do just as good a job as you would."

That had been the last straw to convince him he needed to go. His mother was wise, in her own woman's way, but she had not the wisdom of a king. Sometimes he wondered if it had truly been the right choice for his father to abdicate the throne. A woman had a place, but the throne was not it.

And what kind of man gave up his noble duty? It went against everything he had been taught.

His queen mother was cautious, and safe, and practical. But sometimes, a king must be brave. Sometimes he must risk it all for what's right. Sometimes, he had to be a man.

Heimdall had always had the right of it. The gruff mentor's favorite words...A man never leaves a fellow man behind. A king does what is needed.

How could he ignore that?

Leaving Heimdall's rescue up to commoners would be unconscionable. Nay, it would be unjust. A choice for a lesser man to make. But a true king must live by the wisest words he knows. To do anything less would be a betrayal of the sacred oath he made to his people. It would be treason. It would be evil!

Atheras mentally jotted down those last few lines. The royal biographer would need some help adequately describing his feats today. Oh, and the bards! If only he could think of a rhyme for illustrious. Sure, it wasn't usual for a prince to help write his own songs, but the local mummers could be so uninspired...

His blade caught on a ropy tangle, and he cursed as he pulled it free. If only heroism wasn't so damn inconvenient.

Salei watched the young warrior intently, perched on a tree branch a safe distance above the soulthorn vine bramble below that this valley was named after. She couldn't believe her luck. She'd been hoping for a gazelle, or at best a bear to take down and bring back. Never could she have hoped for a quarry this valuable.

Their village had started to age, and seed was needed for the next generation of daughters. The elders had begun to worry that they would get desperate, that they'd settle for the first male peasant that stumbled their way. Weak seed bred weak children, but sometimes survival called for it.

He was either incredibly brave or incredibly stupid, or some combination of the two. Or maybe the strange metal shell he covered himself in was effective defense from the wicked ethereal thorns that covered the vines.

Even so, there was a tree only paces away even a child could climb, an ascent of only a few dozen paces, well away from the vines. She had brushed against one as a youth, and the days spent in excruciating pain had taught her to be well aware of her surroundings.

The thorns left otherworldly cuts, bruises blooming beneath her skin seemingly without source nor drop of blood. Perhaps the young chieftain hadn't learned the same painful lesson yet.

It was a good sign. Her quarry didn't need be smart, just fertile. And as she'd been reminded again and again by her elders, "the seed of a warrior is always the strongest".

Whatever that meant. The elders had talked at length of the importance of the quality of the seed, and how to identify a man with a good one, but they'd never been very clear on what that meant. The rituals they practiced to produce the next generation of daughters was a closely guarded secret, only known to and practiced by the sacred priests who'd be responsible for bearing them. It was done in locked temples, the necessary males ushered in and out of secret entrances.

But with a fresh one at her disposal, maybe she could figure out the secret on her own. She imagined the looks on their faces when she came home, round with child and bringing a man with seeds left to give away to their village. Hunting two years earlier than even the youngest scouts, learning the secret ways of creating life, and seeding a generation of strong, noble children...The songs about her would be passed on for generations.

And once his seed was used up, he'd make an excellent slave. Only the most revered of warriors had men at their disposal, and certainly their poor village had never had a male slave of their own. Salei had heard they were stronger than most warriors and completely obedient after their harvest. She'd never understood why the poor creatures didn't simply return to their homes; they weren't kept in chains, but she heard they obeyed the will of any women, their eyes downcast as they carried out orders without a word of complaint. She'd never seen one up close, but she'd caught glimpses from afar. The strange creatures, with barrel chests, burly arms, and thick hair covering their bodies and even part of their faces, seemed like another animal entirely.

The young man below was almost finished with his stupid crusade against the vines, and she could see for sure he was everything her tribe needed in a man. His metal clothes gleamed golden and silver in the sunlight, inlaid with intricate patterns and jewels unlike any she'd seen before. And he had a circlet of gold around his soft, curly hair. It was naively impractical for the jungle, but he must be in high standing with his tribe to be gifted such treasures, or a mighty warrior to have taken them in battle.

The latter seemed less and less likely as she got a better view. He didn't look as much like the male slaves she'd seen. None of the burly muscles or thick hair. He seemed almost...daughterlike. Maybe the ritual was what made the men all big and hairy, and this was just their child form?

Strange.

The man was in the clearing, hunched over, huffing and puffing. Was he...tired? From that?

No matter. She'd waited long enough. Salei rolled off the branch she was on and landed silently on the pile of leaves a few dozen paces below.

For a moment, they stood still. His silver eyes met hers, then darted down to her chest. He looked stunned and transfixed at the same time, like she had glued some priceless treasure to her chest. Then he smiled broadly and reached for his sword. He shouted something in his tongue, a strange garble of lilts and squawks, and charged at her.

Atheras' blood ran cold. The shadow ghost had dropped in front of him, weightless as a feather. Skin dark as peat, naked completely save for some stone kneecaps and spiraling white tattoos that circled her hips and breasts. Beneath his thick metal codpiece, he felt himself start to...respond. The roomy armor was more than big enough to contain his whole quivering erection.

He flushed furiously. What was wrong with him! He was a king. His seed carried the lineage of great men, rulers of a dozen kingdoms. To be aroused by some naked savage. Heimdall, his oldest friend, the only real father figure in his life, was lost. And here he was ogling some animal girl.

Still, the first step of dueling was evaluating your opponent. He did a quick scan over her, trying his best not to focus on the particularly interesting parts of her body. Beneath her trimmed curves was a ripple of muscle. She was deceptively strong. His eyes wandered down her thighs, then between her legs, where a thick bush, dyed a shade of white that matched her tattoos, covered her pussy. Atheras could imagine plunging all four fingerbreadths of his noble cock into that tight cunt, her squirming in pleasure on top of him, accepting his royal seed, his overstuffed jewels drawing up as he...

He shook himself free of the fantasy. Heimdall. Heroism. The Kingdom. He had to focus.

Honesty is the only path forward, his mentor had always said. He would be foolish to deny she had a certain rugged exotic attraction. But he needed to ignore the increasingly urgent throb between his legs. He needed to rescue his master. His only goal now should be to get out of here unharmed.

Although...

The poor girl was unarmed, and naked save some primitive knee armor. He didn't need to harm her to keep himself safe. She was hardly a threat.

His father kept a menagerie that had a variety of exotic animals and peoples. What a trophy she would make for him. It would be like a tale from the old days, returning from the forest with a beautiful being nobody had ever seen before, shy and submissive and willing to please.

And the journey back was long. Who would know if he...enjoyed her company on the way.

As long as he was sure he could hide it from his future queen. Valera would never consider him for marriage if she learned he'd sullied his royal cock. Their marriage had been arranged the day he was born, and to give up his kingly duty for such a dalliance...

The savagess growled something, then snarled like a beast. It didn't hit him until she repeated the noises that she was speaking.

If he bedded her, who would she tell? And how? If he could just scare her into submitting, no blood need be shed.

"Yield, and I shall show mercy!" He reached for his sword even as he gave the traditional warning. He knew he was wasting words.

Atheras started to draw his sword and-

Salei identified the weak points in the ridiculous metal getup. Up close, he looked even weaker; the oversized plates dwarfing his slender frame. It was clear the metal jacket was made for a much larger wearer.

His sword was barely halfway out of its sheath when she struck. Blows cracked lightning-quick against the elbow joints of his armor, reinforced with the worn-smooth stones she carried inside her fist. The metal dented beneath as she struck once, twice, three times. The young man cried out in pain, spewing more lilted gibberish as he tried to fight back. But his movements were pathetically sluggish; every motion was telegraphed heartbeats in advance. Had he never fought before?

She could go for the knees next, but she didn't want to hurt him too seriously. And it was a few days walk back to the village. She didn't want to carry him the whole way. If only she could find another joint to disable...

A bulge of metal stuck out below his belly. Strangely shaped, like he was carrying a melon between his legs. Salei couldn't begin to guess its function. The warrior's entire outfit was beginning to seem comically impractical.

He'd finally managed to draw his sword when she got her hands on his shoulders, but she was too close for the clumsy weapon. She put her hands on his iron shoulderplates, and leveraged her leg to rocket up into the bulge between his legs. It was an odd maneuver she'd never tried before; after all, what point would there be attacking there?

Still, she knew to take advantage of any weakness. Twice more, metal crunched beneath stone, until the bulge crumpled around her knee, the concavity pressing hard into his crotch. Then, she crouched to do the same to his knees, deftly dodging the sword thrust she knew he'd throw in response.

Except no thrust came. His sword clanged off a stone and thumped into the ground. His face had twisted into the most curious expression, his silver eyes — moments ago locked onto her breasts for some reason — turned in towards one another. Then his knees buckled, without her even touching him, and he collapsed in a shuddering heap, his hands shoved between his legs. A high-pitched wheezing filled the clearing, and it took her a moment to realize he was its source.

Had she knocked the wind out of him? Her hit had been far below the solar plexus though. Was it his...flower? No, she remembered her lessons: males didn't have those tight little folds down there. They had something else, but what was it? Her teachers had always been frustratingly vague; such knowledge was only appropriate for her superiors, apparently.

She recalled some lesson about an extra pressure point men had, a weakness of some sort between their loins. That must've been it. But she wasn't even hitting him now. Why was he collapsing? Now he was curled up on the ground, knees to chest, his hand worming desperately between his legs. It looked like he was trying to pull the metal concavity away from him, but the thick leather straps held it snugly against his crotch. His lilting sounds had given way to a choking screech.

What was wrong with him? Salei was beginning to worry that this "warrior" was just too weak to provide for their village. Still, a man was a man, and even a weak seed would be valuable. She would just have to be careful not to hurt him. The forest was a harsh place for the strongest among their tribe; a weakling like him would need protection.

PAIN. Crushing, nauseating pain. Every thought, every word he conjured was twisted by it.

In his youth, he'd been struck between the legs many times, usually by Lurian. But this made those blows feel like faint tickles. It had taken her only a few hits to crush his steel cup inwards, the protection it offered cruelly turned inward against him. His fruits were being crushed mercilessly between bone and crumpled plate.

She had been so fast. Each blow happened in the blink of an eye, and each had ended with a sickening crunch. His arms felt broken, the metal she'd gouged inwards digging deep into something in his elbows that made it hard to control them. But that was nothing compared to the agony in his groin. His vision blurred as he clawed futilely at the tight leather latches that were keeping the crushing armor so tight against him.

The amazon stared down at him, her head cocked to the side curiously. Not angry, not mirthful, not even victorious. She just looked confused, and squatted down close to him to watch his struggle, spreading her thighs apart quite immodestly. He blushed, and rolled away from the pinkness of her womanhood, his face flushing hotly even as he tried to stay lucid through the agony.

Focus. Get out. Unharmd. Find Heimdall. Don't think about her body, or about your jewels. Especially don't think about the sharp stabbing pain pulsing through them, where a rivet from his codpiece was digging in. Get your head out of the gutter. Think like a king, damnit.

He groaned. If only thinking wasn't so hard. His thoughts swam back and forth through a miasma of agony.

Her hands slowly crept between his legs. He shook his head, shaking with horror.

"Don't you dare. You have no right, you... you are an animal." He tried to fight back, bravely, but it was futile.

All at once, his bravery fled. He should never have resisted her; he'd been stupid to think he could even try...

He shook away tears of pain and terror. He was a prince. A hero. He couldn't let his seeds be destroyed so easily, couldn't let this merciless savage end his bloodline. But his limbs were like cloth, limp and useless, and he could only bat ineffectually as she snaked her hand between his legs, surely to castrate him.

Salei tore the leather straps and lifted the crushed metal off of her attacker. Something pink and floppy spilled out, and she gawked at the bizarre organ. Nothing could've prepared her for this.

She understood one of the organs hanging down between his legs, although it looked very different from her own. His pleasure button was larger than a woman's, nearly the size of an acorn, and it had a lot more skin covering than hers, but otherwise it looked familiar. Curiously, his little nub seemed to be twitching, much more than hers did when she rubbed herself. Could he be...excited?

But that interested her much less than the unfamiliar pouch hanging beneath. It was nearly the size of an apple, skin as pale as milk and dusted with a light coating of downy hair, so short and fine it could've been fur. Inside, she could make out the distinct curvature of two round...somethings.

It dawned on her. Even if she didn't know what they were exactly, she knew what they were called. It made so much sense now. She'd always thought the name of the ritual was deeply symbolic, but she finally realized how literal the priests had been. The two dangling orbs were obviously the seeds she was to harvest.

If only she'd brought a knife...But what to do once she'd taken them from him? Did they grow back? Could he reattach them? And how did she turn them into children?

And on top of that, why was it "harvest of the seed", and not "harvest of the seeds"? Clearly, men had two of them. And if they had two, why did the priests insist they could only produce children once? Unless...

Oh goddess, she was blessed. He wasn't normal. He must be a fluke, like an egg with two yolks. And what better sign of a great man than one blessed with an extra manhood? He'd be able to produce two generations of children for them. She couldn't believe her incredible luck. Returning from a hunt with twice the rare harvest would be a feat beyond belief.

She just hoped she hadn't broken them somehow. The round things were mottled black and blue. Still, that shouldn't be a problem. An acorn grew into an oak just fine even if it was a little cracked.

And at worst, her village really only needed one of them.

"My balls! I DEMAND you leave my BALLS alone, you savage beast. Oh...oh god, my balls, my balls..." She'd started to hear where one word ended and another began in his lilting language. She still couldn't understand what all the words meant, but one stood out.

"Balls," she repeated in awe, and a shiver ran through her. He kept saying it while pawing at his crotch, so those things were...balls. And somehow, they contained the secret to making a whole new life inside of her. A rush of heat filled her. They were fascinating, whatever they were, and right then Salei knew she wouldn't be satisfied until she cracked their secret. She picked up the hanging things and rolled them around gently, batting away his feeble attempts to stop her. They were warm and soft, and nearly the size of a chicken egg each. Were these big, or small? Did bigger ones make stronger babies? She had so much to learn.

Her fingers probed gently but firmly into his "balls". Salei was eager to learn their structure. Some spots were hard and firm, but others had more give to them. The softer spots coincided with his bruises, and her prodding into them made him let out the most pathetic mewls.

Well, more pathetic than his other noises anyway. Anywhere she touched them seemed to get a reaction. He was breathing shallow and fast, his voice a strained whisper, "not my balls not my balls not my balls not my balls please. Please. Not my...balls!" Whatever all that meant. She'd only learnt the one word so far.

She continued her explorations regardless. They weren't perfectly round like she thought but rather egg-shaped, and the back of them was tied to him with a thick, twisting cord. The floppy skin that covered them completely made exploration difficult. She wished she could just slice it open and peel it away. That must be what the priests do during the ritual.

Without thinking, her thumbs rolled over an especially soft spot, and sunk deep into the rubbery orb. Its owner let out a piercing wail that made her cringe. By the goddess he was noisy. She could tell he was in some pain, but surely he was pretending how bad it was. She could squeeze her breast this hard and it wouldn't hurt that much, and that was the weakest point on the body.

Maybe he was hoping she'd let him go if he acted pathetically enough, like a dog showing its belly in submission? There was no chance of that. She needed what he had. And she needed him to be quiet while she investigated his gifts.

Atheras had given up on intimidating the jungle beauty. He just had to survive. Just as importantly, his bloodline had to survive. And she seemed very determined to end it right now.

Sometimes, you have to abandon bravery. The future king was a sobbing, crying, mess.

"You...you can't pop them. You can't. Stop, don't pop them please don't pop them please for the love of god don't...MMF!" She moved her body, placing her womanhood over his head, then sat down on his face, muffling his cries.

It was overwhelming. Her scent, her taste, her...her. He'd never been so close to a woman's intimate place before. He tried to hold back, tried to think of his wise mentor's and his loving mother's warnings, but he couldn't control his body. To his horror, his little princehood grew as stiff as it could, and he felt a dribble of precum ooze out of him. He needed to think of something, anything but the dark, strong woman sitting on his face while she crushed his ball.

Dueling. Riding. Anything not sexual. Anything to distract him.

He filled his mind with his least favorite memories, in a vain attempt to calm the twitching of his disobedient cock. The time Lurian "accidentally" barged into his room at the perfect time, dragging the queen mother by the hand to catch him in the middle of a shameful relief yet again. The burning humiliation when she'd pulled his tights down as he was giving a toast to foreign dignitaries, exposing his undersized cock to the whole embassy. And then there was the incident with the pony she'd gifted him that she'd secretly trained to kick backwards with incredible force; he hadn't walked straight for a month after that.

The amazon squeezed harder. Something squicked.

Atheras's mind spasmed as he passed into a whole new realm of pain.

Hm. Strange.

The seeds were really more like fruits, so soft and squishy. Her last squeeze had torn off a tiny piece of the left one, and she could feel it sloshing around inside his bag, separated from the larger mass. Without even meaning to, she crushed it into mush beneath her finger, eliciting a pitiful shriek.

Maybe that was the key. To harvest them, she needed to squash them into liquid.

Oddly, his little nub had grown. It was enormous now, almost the size of her thumb (although a bit thinner). Stranger yet, it had started to leak. Clear stickiness oozed out of the little bud of skin. Her prey was too enthralled to say anything now, his back arched upwards and his eyes turned back into his head. If she had any doubt what his quivering nub meant, all doubt was cleared as he let out a guttural moan. He sounded just as she did when she took her pleasure in the privacy of her tent.

He was enjoying this. A lot. Men were so strange. His nub let out a little spray of clear fluid as she dug her thumbs in deeper into the soft orbs below. What was that water that came out when she squeezed his seeds?

It hit her. It was juice! Another squeeze and another spurt confirmed it. It was just like the yether fruits she'd eaten as a child. She'd spent many a sticky summer day picking the ripest ones, squeezing them to a pulp inside their bulging pod, then drinking the juice out of the puckered stem or dribbling it into a pot for preservation. This had to be the right way to harvest a man. The elders had always said that eating the yether fruits would make any child into a mighty warrior. Now she knew why. That was practice.

And she'd had so much practice.

But she didn't want to harvest them yet. She still didn't know how to use them. What if she squeezed the juice out and it went bad before she learned how to use it? She couldn't risk wasting such precious stuff. Still...Maybe she could just get some of it out, to experiment with. Surely, he had lots more stuffed into those bulging orbs. He wouldn't miss it if she pulped them just a bit.

He kept up his gibbering even when she let go of him, and his words brought vibrations to her dripping sex.

The sensation was...pleasant. She purred in satisfaction. He shoved his hands between his legs again, for some reason grabbing the very organs she had just had her own hands wrapped around. That confirmed it: as soon as she had let go, he grabbed his balls again.

He must like how it felt to have them squeezed. His fingers probed the swollen seedpod, much gentler than she had been, rolling his orbs around like he was trying to find the soft spots on his fruit.

His other hand wrapped around his little boynub (this seemed like the right name for it; it was too different from her button to keep calling it that) and gave a few quick pumps before letting go, leaving it twitching. The pink thing was almost peeking through its clitoral hood, and Salei saw that it had a tiny slit at the end. A stream of clear juice dribbled down it, presumably the result of him squeezing his fruits.

So bizarre.

What was he doing, what was he doing!

He couldn't believe he'd fallen into a moment of weakness just then. He was pinned to the ground by a demoness, for god's sakes! But she was on top of him, and her dark pussylips were suffocating. The intoxicating scent and taste of the musky woman drowned his thoughts. It took all of his willpower to resist stroking himself again. On top of him, she squirmed and writhed, rubbing herself against his face as she bent over.

Whether or not he touched himself hardly seemed to matter now. With her sitting on his face, he was barely hanging onto the edge. Her scent pushed him so close to a shameful release from only a few strokes.

It was so unfair! Why couldn't he control himself, even now?!

Suddenly he felt her warm breath between his legs. She had bent over. What horror was coming next?

"<I'm not ready to harvest you yet. If only you could tell me how to use your juice. I'm so excited for us!>" He could only imagine what she was saying in her growling language. Threatening him, telling him what torture she'd inflict next, teasing him about living a life without his balls? What did she want from him anyway? Why did she need to cause him such pain?

"I...I command you to stop. In the name of Cantelas, you must...stop!" He whispered, his voice cracking adorably on the last word.

"<I'm glad you're enjoying it though. I was worried I was hurting you.>"

"I know you can't understand me, but I...I need my balls. My kingdom needs my balls. I am a noble, a great man. I command"

"<You're so cute, and weak. Not like the men I'd heard of. And your fruits...they're just squishy and soft and slippery and fun! I need to get a taste for myself. Don't worry, I won't harvest the whole things yet. I'll be gentle, I promise. I don't want to hurt you.>"

"Please..."

"Please". She didn't quite know what that word meant but his begging tone told her enough. It was a plea, a request for more. And she was happy to give him what he asked for. She was nowhere near ready to stop anyway.

The orbs were too big to both fit in her mouth, which was just as well. If she bit down too hard, she'd certainly harvest them much too soon. With only one fruit between her jaws, at least the risk was halved. They were salty, and faintly musky. She rolled the left ball around in her mouth, probing it with her tongue and positioning it between her molars. It tugged away from her, but she clamped down on its stringy cord with her front teeth just enough to keep it in her mouth, gently sinking her molars deeper into his fruit as she did.

Beneath her teeth, she felt something tear. There was a little indentation at the bottom of the fruit where she'd broken a piece off before, and she probed that with her tongue. She was rewarded as another tiny chunk squeezed out of him through the hole, and then another as she clenched her jaw tighter. The thing was starting to slowly give way as its insides squirted out.

Her efforts were working. Above her, his boynub twitched like a rabbit's nose, juice dribbling out in a steady stream from its wrinkly tip. She could see the outline of it beneath his skin, like her own nub writ large. The clear stuff began to slick down his balls and the bottom of her neck and chin. She was squeezing out so much!

Still, the stickiness wasn't a pleasant feeling. She pinched the quivering thing with her thumb and forefinger and delicately pointed him back up towards his own body. It occurred to her that if it was but a few inches longer, it would be nestled between her breasts. Good thing it wasn't, she'd hate to have them covered in his-

His wail went an octave higher beneath her, and a spurt of white jumped out of his slit, painting a stripe across her chest like a poorly drawn tattoo. Another followed, then another, the warm stuff dribbling down her hanging cleavage and dripping back onto his belly. He gasped and moaned, and she let go of the twitching thing in surprise. This white goo must be the deeper parts of his seed pushing out of him, the thick concentrate at the center of the orb. Her first time, and she'd already forced that out. Salei couldn't help but be proud of herself. If only she'd been a priestess; she clearly had a talent for this work.

His juice didn't come out all at once, the way a popped yether fruit's did. It came in spurts and gasps, dwindling off more with each successive release. She counted almost a dozen of them before they died out. She gave his fruit another gentle chomp, and it gave way with an encouraging sound, but he only managed a pathetic final trickle. Even his moans of pleasure had died off. Disappointed, she lifted off of him to take a look. Her little man's eyes were rolled back and his body twitched, and he didn't seem to be reacting to anything.

Guys were so odd. Even the way they slept was different.

Her first partial harvest was a massive success. Still, she had so many questions. For one, what did she do with the juice when she'd gotten it out? Could she store it? How long could it last? Was this a true harvest? She'd thought she had to break his seeds entirely, but she'd obtained her prize just fine without shattering them.

Well...She'd definitely made some permanent changes. His left fruit was mangled and stretched, covered in bite marks and bruises. It wasn't entirely round any longer, but deflated slightly, with a few sharp dimples where she'd bit hard enough to tear a piece off. And even stranger...when she jiggled it, the two halves moved around independently, like two halves of a walnut tied loosely together with twine (except much, much larger).

She still had so much to learn.

Chapter 3

The prince's nude body shivered under the new moon as he worked at his bonds, struggling to break free as quietly as possible. It was hard when even the tiniest motion between his legs sent him spasming.

After she'd finished her torture of him, she'd stripped him nude, tied him up and thrown him over her shoulder like a side of beef. He'd tried to resist, but the pain between his legs was debilitating. And it hadn't gone down one whit in the hours since morning.

The physical agony from his testicles was almost as bad as the shame of his weakness. Giving in to his own urges was shameful enough, but releasing his seed from a single touch from her was insult to injury.

Yet still, he couldn't stop replaying the moment in his head. Even the memory sent his cock twitching hopefully, and that tiny movement was enough to send another twinge of pain up through him, especially from the burning crevice in his left testicle.

The pony kick so many years ago had left him with a benign seam between the two hemispheres of his massive left fruit. It was a permanent gift from his sister, a bumpy little ridge that was just one more reminder that women had a power over him he'd never balance. Sometime during today's torment, the seam had split. His once-whole fruit was now two halves, loosely connected to each other. Whenever the raw things rubbed together, the agony drove him to tears.

From experience, he knew it would heal...eventually. But for now, it made escaping that much more difficult. The amazon rolled over, and Atheras' heart leaped into his throat. He rubbed faster at his bonds, holding in the moans of pain from the rhythmic shifting between his legs.

He needed to stop thinking about the pain. Escape was more important than his discomfort, no matter how great. Heimdall needed him. If he'd been captured by one of these creatures...He shuddered to imagine what they'd do to him. The old blademaster was strong, but this girl was so cruel. And strong. And fast. He took small comfort in the fact that at least Heimdall had already had his children.

Strangely, she'd given him simple comforts after she was sure he was securely bound. She'd hunted and gathered dinner for them, and he saw her divide out equal portions to both. When night fell she covered him in a blanket and made sure he was comfortable, despite his bonds.

The vines around his feet and hands were tight enough that he could barely shuffle, so escape was out of the question even if his balls weren't in such a fragile state. He hadn't started working to break them until he was sure she was asleep.

Oddly, she'd seemed so concerned about some of the injuries she'd given, applying cold water and some sort of healing poultice to his bruised elbows and ribs. Not his balls, though. Those she kept untouched, thankfully. But all through their dinner of rabbit and wildberries, she stared at them hungrily, muttering under her breath in her growly language. Once or twice, he could pick up the only Cantelan word she knew in the midst of the babble.

"Balls."

Every time she said it he shivered. He was a prince, but he felt like a piece of meat.

God only knew why she'd cracked his jewel, nor why she seemed so insistent on treating him nicely now. He shouldn't spend time trying to comprehend the mind of the savage. He needed his energy focused on his mission. Once he'd escaped and freed Heimdall he could worry about what some beautiful Amazon thought of his manhood. Maybe a more formal expedition was in order, with a full cohort of armed guards.

Right after a delicate appointment with the royal surgeon, and a period of healing for his busted jewel. And he'd need a stronger codpiece made. Much stronger; folded steel this time.

And maybe for all of his guards as well. Even a commoner didn't deserve this fate.

The vines gave way beneath his frantic rubbing. He was free! He reached down to untie his ankles, moving as quickly as he could without making too much noise. She was lying only paces from him. He looked over to make sure she was still asleep and was rewarded with the view of her breasts rising and falling in slow rhythm. The faint shadow of where he'd painted her with his seed was still etched across them.

It took him a dozen heartbeats to realize he'd stopped moving as he stared at her. Blushing, he broke out of quiet reverie of her naked body to continue his escape. His cock was aching hard again. Again! Usually a relief granted him a reprieve from his shame for at least a few days. Especially one as shamefully explosive as that. Why couldn't he control himself?

But that had been his first release in weeks; before Heimdall got captured, he'd been trying so hard to hold back his orgasms. He'd been spending time with Valera, getting to know her better before their future wedding, and seeing her gentle smile convinced him that any sacrifice was worth it. He loved her, and he didn't want to betray her trust for such childish reasons. So his balls had grown, painfully swollen with the seed he had promised her, tinged blue as he struggled to keep his resolve day after day.

And the amazon had forced every drop out of him. Yet still, his cock wouldn't stay down. He had to ignore it. He had a mission. He threw away the vine that had bound his legs and started to creep away, slowly enough not to disturb his aching nuts, trying to stay so quiet he didn't wake his captor.

That didn't seem to be a problem though. She slept deeply, not disturbed even when he snapped a dry twig on accident. A cloud passed, and the weak moonlight illuminated her nipples, all pointy and stiff in the fall breeze.

That wasn't the only thing stiffening. He bit his knuckle to keep from howling; His cock's tiny twitch had sent a cruel spasm of pain through his bifurcated ball. Knees turned together, he tried to stay still until the pain passed. And all the while, he stared at those barely-illuminated nipples.

He didn't notice he was stroking himself until another spasm of pain alerted him to the movement. This was so wrong. He'd finally freed himself, taken the first step to being a hero, and now he was doing...this?

Another painful pump, then another. She rolled over in her sleep, her breasts slapping heavily against each other, their shapely curve beautifully illuminated by the moon.. Then she readjusted herself, spreading her legs wide apart, and suddenly her pussy was visible too, moonlight pouring over it as she sleepily spread out.

Honor. Pump

Duty. pump pump pump

Heim-

He gave in to his pleasure, his hand a blur up and down his cock. His balls flopped wildly around with his motions, but he gritted his teeth and tried to ignore the agony. It was the touch he'd been so desperate for before when she'd ruined his release, leaving him spurting in the most frustrating, pleasureless manner.

Yes, that was it. He needed some real pleasure to actually relieve the pressure building inside of him. One good climax was all he needed, then his mind would be clear and he could finish his mission.

He would get it over with as quickly as possible. It never took him long anyway.

Salei continued to pretend to sleep as her man broke out of the bonds. Of course the weak vines she'd used weren't strong enough to really hold him; it was always important to give slaves a chance to escape the first night. Rarely would they attempt again after they were caught. Once his spirit was broken, she likely wouldn't even have to tie him up again.

But she didn't expect him to wait this long to try to escape. Why didn't he just tear the vines off earlier? They were weak enough for her to have done so as a child. And why did he spend so much time just staring at...her? Was he watching her, searching for a sign of deception? Was her breathing not regular enough? A twinge of panic almost made her heart beat faster, but she shut it down. No, she'd had total control of her body since her first moon's blood. And besides, it was almost pitch black.

Finally, she heard him break the vines. It was almost time for the "chase". She rolled over, keeping her eyes in the shadows so he wouldn't see her watching.

Any second now, he'd sprint off into the jungle, and she'd...

Like a child who'd just discovered the pleasure between her legs, he was rubbing himself shamelessly. It was big enough that he wrapped his whole hand around it. Well, not quite his full hand. She could just barely see the little thing in his fist as he pumped away furiously, frantically pulling back all the skin that dwarfed it to rub at the pink flesh inside. His other hand was beneath, gently squeezing the fruits that she knew was the real source of his pleasure. Most of his attention focused on his relatively intact one, but every now and then she saw him move over to the shattered seed, then jerk it away like he'd touched a fire.

Her heart almost sped up as she tried to figure out this new mystery. Why wasn't he running away? He'd been so defiant earlier, but maybe she'd misread his actions. Or maybe he'd changed his mind. She'd figured he was saving his fruits for someone else, and that's why he was so resistant to her harvest.

He changed his mind. She blinked, stunned.

He'd untied himself to show that he could escape if he wanted...but he didn't want to. Their different tongues prevented the words from getting through, but she knew his meaning. He was offering himself to her. She'd never been more honored in her life. If only she'd known how to use those soft, swollen things. What mysterious ritual did she need to do to have her belly swell with child...

Her belly. Inspiration struck her. She couldn't know for sure, but it seemed right. If she wanted to plant his seed inside her, she'd need to eat it. And he was preparing himself, all for her. It made so much sense.

Why wait any longer? She jumped up to meet him, her eyes on the delicious prize dangling between his legs.

When she sprang to her feet, he tried to let go of himself. But her body had cast a spell on him. It felt like his hand was glued to his cock, and he was so close to release, just a few more strokes and...

The world exploded. She had hit him hard enough to lift him off the ground, her stone kneecap crushing his naked jewels up and into him. He was half a pace in the air when the pain hit him. Two shattered halves of princehood sheared together, and blinding agony broke his grip.

He fell to the ground, curled up and quivering. Hiding himself was useless; she flipped him over as if he weighed nothing and spread his legs apart. Atheras let out a scream as her head descended to his groin once more.

But this time was different. She took his whole cock in his mouth, and his mind went blank again. It was the best feeling he'd ever experienced. Her warm tongue danced across his ultrasensitive tip.

A nauseating jolt distracted him from his ecstasy. Something was digging into his shattered ball. Something hard and merciless.

Oh.

White-hot pain blinded him, and he felt something gave way beneath her thumbs. He could tell his ball was now fully in two pieces, both mercilessly still attached to him. Cruel fingers dug into each, and he let out a piercing scream. Still, her warm mouth was overwhelming. He was so close to spilling his seed. Thrashing and writhing, he tried as hard as he could to throw her off. But still she stayed between his legs.

"Let me go! I command you, release my-" he gasped, and words left him.

With a satisfying squick, half of his left fruit gave way beneath her thumbs. She moaned in appreciation as she tasted the thick juice he squeezed out. It was bitter and salty, barely sweet enough to enjoy. Not anywhere near as pleasant as fruit juice, but she swallowed dutifully all the same. She still needed to endure one more dose, just to be sure...

She shifted the remaining half of his fruit between her palms and laced her fingers together. The half-orb drew up quivering, but she pinched down just hard enough to keep it in place. Its owner whimpered pathetically above her, but his nub stayed rock-hard in her mouth. Her tongue circled its sensitive pink tip.

And she started to squeeze. He wriggled madly, overcome with his pleasure, as she finished harvesting his first ball. Drop by drop, she squeezed it out of him.

Reality was too much. No man could stay connected to it through this much misery. He started to float through time...

It was years ago, but not that many. He was lying in bed, convalescing after another injury. Lurian had "accidentally" spilled a pot of freshly-boiled tea on his sensitives. The cold poultice his mother insisted on applying herself every hour did help to calm the fiery chafing of parboiled princehood, but he was still in...great discomfort. Underwear was out of the question; he was to remain spread-eagle on his bed at all times, to allow the herbs to do their healing work and to stop him from hurting himself further, she claimed.

It was not his proudest moment. His little brother had joined him for breakfast that morning, and Vergil was doing his best to avoid looking at Atheras's bandaged ballsack.

"So, little brother...how is life in court?"

"It...it is the same as always, my future king. It's quiet, a lot of the nobles went south for the winter." He'd always appreciated his brother's respect; sometimes, it felt like he was the only one who gave it.

"Lurian is quite...unoccupied." Vergil winced. "Not...not to distract from your own injury, but..."

"I know what you mean." Atheras gritted his teeth in male sympathy. "When she gets bored, she gets...cruel."

"Crueler than usual."

"This can't keep happening. What's she done to you? When I finish healing, I will meet with her. I'll bring royal guards, I'll make sure she knows not to ever harm us again. She must be contained."

"NO!" Vergil shouted, then blushed. "No, please. I don't want you risking anything. She's the princess, we can't just...lock her up."

"We have to do something."

"No, we...we don't." Vergil sighed. "We just have to wait it out. I know she hurts us...So badly," his eyes flicked down to Atheras' scalded princehood, "but we can't fight her. We just can't."

"I must do what's right. If am to be king..."

"Brother. You can't." Vergil's voice wavered. "You're not strong enough. You...you shouldn't challenge her."

"I must try. If she defeats me..."

"She'll castrate you if you keep trying to stand up to her." Vergil said quickly, color rising in his cheeks.

"She...she promised. Last night. When she caught me...unaware. The royal cobbler made her these new heels, and she said she needed to practice. She kept saying she'd make you a eunuch."

At that horrible word, Atheras' throat went dry. She wouldn't actually...

"Mother would never allow it."

"Mom isn't always around to protect us. As much as she tries..."

"Lurian wouldn't. She wouldn't dare."

Vergil looked up at him, eyes watering. "Brother, please..."

"She...we have to stand up to her." Atheras trailed off as his younger brother dropped his tights.

"Look. Look what she did."

Vergil pulled his leggings off.

Atheras couldn't help himself. He tried to swallow his jealousy as his "little" brother's manhood flopped out. Soft, it was nearly as thick as a carrot, and hung down a few inches past his balls. His brother's manhood was just a bit bigger than average, which meant it dwarfed his own. Vergil's crown jewels were much smaller than Atheras' fist-sized ones, but that was small comfort.

And now, even that advantage was debatable. Vergil's nuts were swollen and bruised, blue and purple and even a worrying black in some places. They'd swollen as large as plums. Small circles marked where an unforgiving heel had stabbed in. Atheras nearly cried. It was one thing to be unable to protect himself...but to let his little brother undergo harm was unforgivable. What sort of man let down those he swore to protect. What sort of king...

"Brother, I...I am so sorry. I wish...I wish she'd taken her anger out on me, instead."

"Me too." Vergil said, letting out a small sob.

"Next time...I will protect you." Atheras said. But his brother wouldn't meet his eyes.

"Next time...of course, my king. Now, if you don't mind, I would very much like to visit the royal ponds. It's almost time for the ice harvest, and..."

"Right. Please, if you could bring me an ice pack as well." His younger brother crammed himself back into his tights and waddled out, grimacing and gasping with each step.

Next time...he'd never let this happen again. A king couldn't let down those he was sworn to protect. If anyone, brother or sworn man alike, were put in harm's way...he would be responsible.

Maybe he wouldn't test that principle on his sister, though. A king also had to be realistic, and he'd need heirs someday. He let out an aching groan and tried not to count down the moments until mother came by with another poultice, and with it, the tiniest relief from the burning pain in the core of his testicles.

Pounding, throbbing, pain. Mind-numbing, stomach churning. Atheras blinked awake to the familiar hell that was his life.

The sky had turned the color of a bruise, dim twilight illuminating the world. An image came into focus. Pink on black flesh. Striped, no, covered in white. Stripes of skin peeked through, and as he watched a finger daintily slid down her cleavage, scooping up another fingerful of his goo and bringing it to her lips.

"<You're awake! Thank you so much for your gift. I tried to swallow it all, but you had so much.>"

More than white covered her though. Strings of red and...clumps. Of. Oh god he was going to be sick. She swallowed another glob. He tried to speak, but words failed him.

"<I don't want to waste it, of course. Some of it has already dried up, so I'm doing the best I can to swallow the rest fast. I can't wait for your seed to plant inside of me. This is the greatest gift I've ever been given, and we can't even understand each other. I know you are my prey, but I...I am so happy you gave me your>...ball." It was the longest she'd "talked" to him yet, and she was blushing furiously. But only that last word stood out to him.

His blood ran cold as he snaked his hand between his legs to find out what he already knew. His modest princehood was noticeably lighter.

Another hand swiped across her chest, and she swallowed the handful dutifully.

"<I hope it plants this time. I hope I did it right. But it makes me so happy knowing that, even if I didn't, we have another chance to try.>" She smiled avariciously, surely detailing the horrors that awaited him.

"Please...please don't take my last ball. I know you're stronger than me, I know I can't escape. But if you have the sense, the notion of mercy....or, submission, or anything that might convince you to....let me keep it." He blinked back tears, ashamed of himself for falling so low.

Still, he had to be realistic. He only had one more chance.

"Please don't take my ball."

"<Ball!>" She said, her face lighting up. "<I'm so glad you agree. I hope the next one doesn't taste so bad, though.>" She swallowed another handful with a grimace, then smiled down at him.

"<I just want to say...you're welcome. I could tell that felt really good for you. I'm so glad I can help you out. Males are still...confusing to me, but I've learnt so much from you.>"

Salei gulped the cold river water, trying to wash the taste out of her mouth. It seemed like a fruitless task.

No wonder being a priest took such commitment. How could they swallow that much at once? The stuff dried up quickly too, so she was left with long, shiny patches streaking across her. Washing that off was a hassle, and it stuck to her hair like pitch.

She hoped she'd done it right. How long should it take to become apparent? She'd hoped to have a child on the second or third day of their journey, then start on the next daughter right after.

Tomorrow evening, she decided. If she wasn't definitely with child by then, she'd clearly done something wrong and would need to think of another method. Perhaps the secret was less obvious than she'd thought. Any method that didn't leave a taste like this in her mouth would be a welcome change. She took another swallow of brackish water, and spat out more of his dead seed into the river.

Tomorrow evening, she would have a child or she would take his last fruit.

Chapter 4

Atheras followed along with her under the hot sun, not even thinking about escape anymore. His lone ball swung awkwardly between his legs. His sack had been enormous to fit both of its occupants; with one missing, there was an uncomfortable amount of slack. He gritted his teeth as it slapped into him again. Just one more reminder of what she'd taken from him.

He still couldn't believe it. There was nothing a surgeon could do now; for the rest of his life, his royal jewels would have an empty setting. The spot where his left ball used to hang had shriveled up into a puckered wrinkle. It made him feel no longer whole. His lifelong fear of being less than a whole man had been made a reality.

Unfortunately, his delicate state didn't seem to keep him from further torture. The crack of dawn saw her waking him up with a hard stomp to the gonad, followed by a cruel twist. Throughout the day, kicks, knees, punches, and thrown rocks all found his remaining crown jewel at seemingly random times on their journey. And having only one ball to absorb the blows made the pain twice as bad.

After a particularly hard knee left him curled up in the fetal position, gasping for breath beneath the hot sun, he finally erupted at her.

"WHY are you doing this to me?" He said through gritted teeth. "Was popping my first ball not enough? Have you not caused me enough agony?!"

"<Of course I know it's mine! But I do love being reminded.>" She growled back at him, and her grin sent chills down his spine.

"What's the point? Just to see me beg and cry?" He tried to hold tears back. "No man deserves that, besides rapists. I'm a...king. I need them. You can't take my last one from me. I command it."

But she just stared at him vacantly. Then she flipped her heel backwards, slamming it into his groin yet again. He fell to the loamy forest floor, clutching himself once again while she patiently waited for him to get up.

"<Hopefully these blows are helping loosen up your fruit for later. They should make it mushy inside, so it's easier to squeeze apart. I can tell you like how it feels too, and that makes me so happy! I want you to enjoy your fruit while it's still intact.>"

No more talking. Words got him nothing but pain.

So much pain...

Evening came.

They'd settled in a clearing near a clear blue pond teeming with fish. He picked the bones from his charred dinner and tried to ignore her again, but it was impossible. She kept pawing between his legs as he ate, rolling his now-very-tender remaining fruit around. Even now, she was staring at him curiously, her head cocked like a cat sizing up its prey. Her eyes were unmistakably glued to his private parts.

Then she rubbed her belly. What was she trying to say? She'd done it a few times along their journey.

"<Are you ready? Your seed didn't plant the first time, but I think we were doing it wrong. Last night the goddess sent me a vision. I learned so much.>" She grinned. It was hard to tell in the dark, but he could see the wetness between her legs.

More growling. Now she was crawling over to him. Her breasts hung low and wobbled as she went. He blushed and backed away, quickly finding himself up against a tree.

"Please, I...I don't know what you want. If only you could tell me, just...just tell me and I'll give it." He swallowed hard, trying to hold back his next words.

"I'm done being brave. Just tell me what you want."

When she was almost face to face with him, she stood up. She rubbed herself again, then gestured between her legs to her dripping pussy. He cringed in anticipation at the pain he was sure was coming.

But instead of stomping his gonad, she started to lower herself onto him, straddling him. She sat on his thighs, her pussy rubbing up against his rock-hard princehood. Her weight rolled his remaining jewel around beneath her, pressing it uncomfortably against the knob of a root. A small smile came to her face, and she looked upwards to meet his eyes. He shook his head in horror.

"Don't...please don't. Please, it's my only one."

"<She showed me the technique, and it felt so beautiful and perfect that I knew it was a true vision. Your fruit must enter me from below, not my mouth. Like this, here.>"

She lifted herself up a tiny bit and scooted forward.

"<I'll sit on your "cock", Then I'll squeeze your fruit into mush until it squirts out inside of me again. And it has to be inside me when it comes out! She made it very clear all your little babies die if you squirt while you're outside of me. This'll be your last chance ever, so we can't waste it. Not again...>"

Cock. Another word he recognized. Where had she picked it up?

No matter. In this position, his was perilously aligned with her pussy. If she kept moving forward he was going to slide in.

Oh.

Atheras finally realized why she'd been rubbing her stomach.

"You...want a child?!" He sputtered. "Why the fuck have you-" Her butt squashed his ball against the root, and he gasped "-why have you been trying to CASTRATE me?!"

"<I know it sounds crazy to think she'd speak directly to me, but I know it was a real vision. Only a goddess could show me such exquisite ecstasy. Although in my dream your... "cock" was a lot bigger...I wonder what she meant by that.>"

If he had been the hero he thought he was, he would've thrown her off, struck her down, even bravely run away. A true hero could control himself, and wouldn't give up his purity and sacred seed for a savage.

A true hero certainly wouldn't sigh deeply and lean back. He shuddered as his foreskin pulled back and his ultrasensitive little head made contact with her pussy, then plunged inside.

Salei let out a soft moan when he slid inside her. It wasn't a bad sensation, but it didn't match the orgasmic vision the goddess had shown her last night. It just didn't fill her up the same way.

But of course, they were only visions. Why had she been shown a "cock" (the Goddess had given her its name) so much bigger than his? It had been nearly the size of a banana, and big enough to wrap her hand around. In comparison, his tiny nub seemed somehow disappointing and inadequate. Even when he was inside her, she could barely feel it.

Maybe if she moved around a little more...Something rubbed inside her very pleasurably, and she let out another moan. Yeah, that wasn't so bad. If she was gentle, it felt pretty nice. She couldn't bounce on him like a rabbit like the Goddess had shown her, and he certainly couldn't bend her over and pound her from behind as she'd hoped, but if she was slow and gentle, maybe she could feel a little of that ecstatic dream in real life.

It was difficult to control herself though. Just a little too much vigor and he would slip out. And she had to squeeze his fruit into mush at the same time, or he wouldn't let out his precious juice. She leaned back, holding onto his shoulders for stability, enjoying the feeling of his last ball flattening beneath her buttocks.

His tiny cock barely gave her the pleasure she was desperate for, but feeling his ball start to bulge and pancake beneath her made up for it. His eyes widened, then teared.

"If we just move somewhere else, I...I can finish easier. Please, the roots are digging into my nut, and starting to really hurt. If you keep pressing into it like that it might-"

She lifted herself up another inch and let all her weight slam down. His babbling ended in a mewling cry. Another lift, and another slam. This time, he gave her a satisfying crunch.

"<It's starting!>" She squealed gleefully, finally feeling the pleasure the Goddess had promised her. His cock might be inadequate for the job, but at least he still had a ball to break.

"<Oh, I can't wait until it's squished all the way. I can just imagine it giving out like your last one did, exploding into mush, shooting all your gooey white stuff up into me. Goddess, I can't wait to bear your child!>" Now she clung to him for support. Her body needed more, faster, harder. Up and down, up and down she bounced on his tiny princehood, his fat ball flattening more with each landing.

"No...no, god, please not my last one."

He made his best effort to push her off, but of course it was useless. She didn't even have to pause her riding to bat his hands away. Her thrusting pushed him back into the tree trunk, rough bark scratching his back. She was so soft, and wet, and tight, and her breasts swung pendulously in front of him. At each bounce, she let out her own little sound of pleasure.

But she was also strong, and muscle was heavy. And then her weight came down right onto his ball, right when the hard knob of root was pressing into it. A wet sound came out of his organ, eerily similar to an awl going through wet leather. Atheras' eyes went wide.

"Ohhh...oh god. It punched through."

"<Almost there!>"

If only she'd let him move from this horrid throne of roots. All around them was soft, forgiving forest loam. If his scrotum hung only a few inches away, he could actually be enjoying his rape.

Atheras looked up at her, desperate. Her mouth wore a smile, half-open and greedy with lust, small pants of pleasure coming with each little movement she made. She locked eyes with his, then leaned down and kissed him passionately. Like his virginity, he'd been saving his first kiss for his fiancée. But he deserved no such honor, not anymore. He kissed the demon back, pressing his tongue hard against her, simply grateful for the tiny relief her shift in position brought his testicle.

At least, for a moment. Then she pulled away from him, leaning back and putting all her weight onto his gonad. He groaned in pain, once again regretting the weakness he'd been cursed with between his legs. Then her body jolted, her eyes flickering with surprise as she abruptly fell half an inch.

His vision went white, and time stopped. When he came to, he realized he'd been letting out a piercing wail. His testicle felt broken and raw, lanced with agony. He prayed to God that she'd finally finished, that that pop indicated he was completely unmanned at last. At least it'd mean the nightmare was over.

"<Oooh, that was a big one! We're not done yet though. I wish I could go a lot harder, if I could really bounce, your fruit would break in no time! But you keep almost falling out, and I'm really afraid you'll let your juice out while you're not inside of me again. I don't want to waste your last one too... >"

But then she lifted her butt up again and dropped down, and the new jolt of pain confirmed that he still had more hell to go through.

"Just...just let me move. Just a little. Two inches, it's all I need. Then you can fuck me or drain me or...or use me for whatever godforsaken purpose you have. Just let me keep my ball! And for the sake of all that is holy, what are you SAYING?!"

She blinked. She still couldn't understand him, but that last sentence almost...made sense to her. He wanted to know what she was saying. He really wanted to listen to her!

Gripping his shoulder with one hand so she could keep fucking him, she held her other up, her two fingers as far apart as his cock was long.

"<It's too small. I know it's not your fault, but if it was just a little bigger. Two more inches, it's all I'd need. To...stay on top of you.>"

His tiny cock moved at just the right angle, and she let out a gasp. He'd hit that magic spot again.

"Oh god, you're bending it-"

"<Goddess, it still can feel good though. If I position you just right...>"

Salei tried her best to keep him angled just the right way for her to finally feel something. Her hips gyrated with only the tiniest movements, as she tried to keep the tiny thing rubbing against the spot of pleasure she'd just discovered.

But she couldn't just focus on enjoying his cock. Leaning back, she felt his ball roll around beneath her, flattening and sliding between woody roots. All her weight rested on the squishy orb distorting beneath her. If she had any doubt she was doing her job right, his gasps and screams let her know otherwise.

"<I didn't think you'd last this long. Last time you let it out so quickly...But I'm glad you are. You deserve to enjoy this. It is your last time, after all.>"

She felt his fruit expand suddenly beneath her with a satisfying crunch. She sat up and tried to aim her butt precisely, so she'd land on the same spot and continue the damage, but keeping her balance was too hard. His little cock slipped out of her, and Salei fell backward into the dirt.

This method was fun, for sure. But it was nothing like vision of ecstasy her Goddess had shown her, all bouncing and thrusting without a care in the world. No, she was being too cautious, too human. She needed to trust. Her vision was pure.

She squatted down on top of him again, sliding him inside herself with ease. Looking into his teary eyes, legs around him, she started to ride again, but this time she didn't concern herself with making sure he stayed inside her. The Goddess had shown her that pleasure was hers to take, in whatever form she needed. Now she started to bounce as hard and as high as she wanted, not focusing on anything but her own ecstasy. Beneath her, his ball no longer had time to squirt out of the way to relative safety. Each slam crunched it against unforgiving wood, and his cock no longer stayed inside her during each thrust.

"Let me cum inside you at least." He panted. "If you're going to castrate me, at least give me--"

Thumpcrunch. He gasped, words leaving him for a heartbeat.

"-give me that chance. One last chance to make at least-gasp-a royal bastard. Please. PLEASE! You said! You asked for a child!" He screamed desperately.

Salei wasn't listening to his gibberish. She had one hand on his shoulder, using it for support as she bucked wildly. Her other hand was between her legs, rubbing frantically at her clit. So close. So close to finally...

She fell backwards, off his cock, her entire weight pinning his ball against the root for the last time.

A gristly squelch announced the end of his only ball's existence. Beneath her, the young man screamed, then his eyes rolled up and he lost consciousness. His cock exploded against her, sending long spurts up across her tits. She pressed her own clit hard against his organ, and could feel every pulse as he emptied out his last fruit onto her body. It was a very pleasing sensation. The pulses of his reproductive finale against her own pleasure was such delicious irony. She rubbed herself against him until she reached her own climax.

Finally, she leaned back, satisfied. He'd shot juice all over her stomach, the underside of her breasts, almost as high as her chin before it had arced back down onto his own body.

And none of it had gotten inside of her. Not a drop.

Her head lolled back, her afterglow clouding her thoughts even as the reality of her mistake started to penetrate the muzzy fog.

How could she be so stupid! The white goo he'd spilled everywhere was sterile the second it landed outside a woman, the Goddess had told her in her vision. No point trying to scoop it back inside herself.

Desperately, she grabbed his fruitsack with both hands, squeezing for any sign of intact flesh. A few chunks floated around, and she squished one after another, hoping for another fertile explosion. But all she managed to do was make him squeak and twitch with each tiny pulping. He finally gasped awake with bloodshot eyes.

"Oh....oh god. It's....you popped it. It's done. " He breathed.

Her thumbs settled on the largest clump of fruit left.

"<Oh! Found one! Maybe it has some juice left...>"

It was barely the size of a raisin, and only just still attached to him. But maybe it was enough...

Quickly, she sat on top of his cock and slid it inside herself. Then she laced her hands around lumpy half-fruit and squeezed hard. But when it popped wetly, nothing came out of him except another shriek.

That was it. His fruits were wasted. Burning shame filled Salei.

It was so obvious now. This whole thing had been a test by the goddess, to see if she could put her need for a child above her own pleasure. And she hadn't. She failed the test, and succumbed to her own urges, and now she'd be returning to her village with neither a male nor a child, but just a eunuch slave. She wanted to scream, and weep, and beat herself in shame. This was the worst mistake she'd ever made.

The amazon tried to stay focused though. Surely, she'd wasted a great gift here. But it wasn't a total loss. Even a castrated male would be a prize for her poor village. And he likely wouldn't be the last male to enter the forest. A few days ago, she'd heard a rumor that an older, very strong male had gotten captured by a neighboring tribe near here. Where there was two, there were surely many more. Perhaps her warrior had been looking for him.

"<I'm...I'm so sorry that I wasted your gift, but I'll never forget that you gave it to me.>"

"P...please...just put some of it inside you...We can still have a child if you put it inside you..."

She scooped up a handful of his precious juice and lifted it to her lips. For some reason, it seemed such a waste not to eat it, even though she knew it was pointless. She swallowed the first mouthful of white goo, somehow enjoying it so much more than last time. Maybe its rarity made it all the much sweeter.

Handful after handful, she scooped up every drop of his juice and swallowed, savoring the sweet stuff on her tongue. Then she pulled him forward and nestled his tear-streaked face between her breasts.

"<It'll be ok. Your new life won't be so bad. At least we'll be together some of the time. You'll be the whole village's slave for a while, until we get more men, so I'll have to share you for a little while. But you're going to lure more of them out, your brothers or your slaves or whoever else from your village seeks vengeance for their lost warrior.>"

"My kingdom will not stand for this. The Cantalan Army will search for me, they'll root you out. They'll exact vengeance a hundred fold over for what you've done to me." He sobbed.

"<And when we capture enough men for every woman to have her own eunuch slave...I'll still choose you as my own.>" She kissed his forehead, then snaked her hands between his legs. Her fingers kneaded his empty sack. It felt so comforting to wrap her hands around what used to be his most precious possessions.

"<I love you so much, my slave.>"

Atheras clung to her back as she carried him down the footpath to her village. She hadn't even bound him. She seemed to know by instinct he wouldn't run away. And she was right.

All those things he said about his nation...he knew better. There was no army coming to his rescue. His mother was sentimental, but she was also practical and cautious. The forest was known to be dangerous; no point losing a whole army in it. It was the rational he'd made for going on his solo mission in the first place.

Besides, even if he went back, he could never be king now. He knew how the Cantelan dynasty dealt with noble heirs who were unsuitable for the throne. When news of his castration made it out, the subject of abdication would be delicately broached to him by a councillor. His mother would be sympathetic to him, but she'd put the fate of the kingdom above his own. An estate in a backwater duchy would be made available for him, and he'd spend the rest of his days out of sight of the nobility while his brother sat the throne.

When it came down to it, every king only had one job: Create the next king. And he simply couldn't perform that royal duty.

His emptied scrotum roiled painfully, and he groaned, clinging tightly to her back, his hands cupping her breasts. He still enjoyed that, at least for now. His cock started to harden against her back. How long until his body couldn't manage that? How long until he got used to the feeling of a limp scrotum between his thighs? Until he forgot he had ever been a man at all?

He suspected it wouldn't be long. Atheras tried to savor the feeling of his hard cock pressing against her. Maybe if he was lucky, she would take some more pleasure from him before it wilted completely.

"<Oops, you're slipping.>" She grunted with exertion and shifted him higher up his back.

Between them, her back rubbed against what was left between his legs, and he shuddered at the intensity of the sensation. But the higher position was much more comfortable.

"Thanks."

"<You're welcome.>"

He clung to his new owner and buried his face in her hair. At least for now, she smelled so attractive to him, and his cock twitched against her. Somehow, he knew she would take care of him. After all, the only part of him she'd ever hurt was his balls. And he had a feeling that wherever she was bringing him, they weren't any friendlier to a set of intact testes than she had been. Removing them early might've been a favor.

Maybe she thought she'd been doing him a kindness all along. He missed his balls terribly, but still...it was almost sweet, in a woefully ignorant way.

Clinging against her strong body, he realized this was the closest he'd ever been with a woman. With his fiancée Valera, his mother had reminded him so often that touching ladies was completely inappropriate for a noble, let alone a king, so they'd not as much as held hands.

He'd liked Valera. She was sweet enough, and smiled very prettily. And they did speak the same tongue. But conversations were distant and stilted, for he never strayed from those topics appropriate to a king-to-be. And any hint of sexuality was completely verboten.

This beautiful woman had no such compunctions. Even now, she didn't seem to mind the gentle thrusts he was making against her, nor the last load of precum he was dribbling down her back. She was warm, and loving, even if her affections were so poorly aimed. The pain she'd caused him was a little worse than what his sister had wrought, but the pleasure she'd given him was otherworldly. And he could talk about anything with her, no matter how personal or embarrassing. Even if she couldn't understand him.

Out here, he wasn't to be a king anymore. All that awful power he'd eventually be saddled with was gone. She may have taken his manhood and his pleasure from him forever, but she'd also lifted that burden. Whatever his role in her life was to be, it couldn't be harder than being king.

And he'd never felt more relaxed in his life. He'd stressed that his royal princehood was too small and uncut for his fiancée, but in an instant she'd relieved him of that stress, forever. Atheras would never have to worry about pleasing a woman now.

He felt almost...free, for the first time in his life.

And safe. Finally safe, from his sister. He'd never have to worry about her hurting his balls out here, for several reasons.

He wasn't in love with the savage. But his relationship with women didn't have to be about romantic love; in fact, that part of life was cut off from him now. Still, he could try to please her. It seemed the sensible choice; she was probably the friendliest person to him around for miles. Somehow he had a feeling whatever tribe she lived with wouldn't treat him as kindly as she did.

"Pleasing" her in the way she obviously needed was out of the question for him of course, but maybe if he stuck by her and did as she said, he could at least earn protection from her tribesmates. He suspected he'd need it.

For some reason, the thought of doing everything to make her happy was very tempting. It was probably just the remains of his male essence making him dreamy for any female; surely, that would pass soon. But the anger he knew he should be feeling was fading too. His balls had brought him nothing but humiliation and misery his whole life, at the hands of his sister, his mother, himself. They were his biggest weakness and greatest shame, and she'd relieved him of them. And now he could be with her, forever.

Until next time
